FATUOUS RELIANCE FOR ENDURING PEACE

In distinction we believe from all wars hitherto, not only while the guns are smoking, but while the campaign is still at its height, acceptable and grantable conditions looking to permanent peace are being regularly canvassed by both sides.

Nothing authentic occurs to us as having emanated from the allies since the ultimatum of President Poincare and Premier Lloyd George, to the effect that it is to be "a fight to the finish."

And while the pronouncement of the new German Chancellor seems to stamp him as implacably for a continuation of the present "frightfulness" campaign, a majority of the committee of the dominant parties in the German parliament is on record for peace, "without annexations and indemnities."

We believe the only assurance for the world of any prolonged freedom from a recurrence of the present appalling saturnalia of blood and carnage is through those responsible for precipitating the world-cataclysm being once for all, effectually rendered hors de combat—not in a condition to repeat the insane outbreak.

We can see no valid hope for world peace till the different countries shall consent, or be forced to give their selfish interests into the keeping of some sort of international government, the same as individuals do, when they become citizens and amenable to law.

The trouble is, eminent publicists, among them the great Alexander Hamilton, seem to find good grounds for believing that nations, unlike individuals, must necessarily act from selfish motives.

And judged by the present low development of leading nations, as regards recognition of the expediency of right and justice, in their intercourse with one another, it does look, at times, like the one who presumed to inject philanthropy into international affairs would stand to be misunderstood, if not to "make itself a prey."—O. ## COX CHAMPIONS OHIO STATE FAIR

Governor James M. Cox is an enthusiastic champion of the Ohio State Fair. It is one of the great institutions of the Buckeye commonwealth that receives a great deal of his attention and co-operation. Being a farmer, Governor Cox is able to appreciate the true value of the fair to those engaged in agricultural pursuits.

The governor believes that children, particularly those of the rural communities, should be sent to the fair, where they will have opportunities to observe and learn as in no other way. Governor Cox has this to say of the fair:

"One of the hopeful signs of our day and generation is the increasing importance that is attached to such institutions as the Ohio State Fair. Living in a state of almost boundless fertility, necessity did not, for many years, teach us the needed lessons of soil conservation and proper cultivation. Crops grew in the virgin soil with little attention and money might be made through methods that have become impossible in recent times.

"The intelligent farmer now knows the basic principles of an industry that is becoming more exacting each year. The wise husbandman does not expect luck when he plants a crop. He makes fortune come his way. When all follow the methods that our agricultural leaders are showing us there will be no such thing as food shortage, prices will be more reasonable and the profits of the farm will be larger than ever before.

"These facts directly join to the State Fair. During the last week in August every farmer in Ohio should spend at least a day there. The visit to this greatest of Ohio institutions should properly not merely be a diversion from ordinary duties. The expense should be provided for in the annual farm budget, just as money for seeds, machinery, farm repairs, improvements and livestock are parts of the budget. The few dollars spent will return a rich profit.

"It is worth while to learn what the other fellow is doing. It is extremely profitable to have the inspiration of witnessing an assemblage of the high-class livestock, the perfect fruits and grains that overflow the exhibit buildings. The watchful fellow can pick up a hint here and there whose value cannot be overvalued.

"The farmers' boys and girls are entitled to a trip to Columbus. The governor's office will be open for a continuous reception to these visitors. Though war time duties press upon the executive time, the governor will be sure to find time to welcome them."

Governor Cox hopes to pay several visits to the fair, and may deliver addresses there.

KEEP YOUR EYE ON SPENCER

The visitor to the progressive burg, after a month or two's absence, notices numerous pleasant reminders, such as the fine residence, now building, of Mr. John Winters, the big, in more ways than one, hardware man, and the residences, built or under construction, of Mr. S. Billman, who might be called one of the town's civic motive powers. Along this line, the Spencer Commercial Club, officered by N. J. Walters, pres., John Firestone, vice pres., Ed. Brown, Sec., and J. H. Fisher, treas., is quite a town acquisition. Organized but two months ago, it has some 30 members, and with its committees on improvement, amusements, industries, etc., it decidedly makes for town development. It has attractive quarters in the bank building, and meets the second Wednesday of the month.

LITCHFIELD

Mrs. Susie Halliday returned home from Spencer the first of the week.

Miss Alice Smith returned to Washington, D. C., after spending her three weeks vacation at home.

Dr. and Mrs. Street entertained a party of friends Tuesday afternoon.

The farmers are very busy this week making hay, cutting wheat and working corn. It surely has been a good week to work.

It is reported Frank Kemmerling and Gertrude Armbruster were married last week. We wish them a long and happy life together.

Rev. O. C. Bedford returned from Cleveland Wednesday. Mrs. Bedford, who has been in the city two weeks, will return Friday. Mr. Bedford came home each Sunday to conduct the services.

Mrs. Alberts of West Salem spent several days with her daughter, Mrs. Frank Preston.

Flying High Are Potatoes, Sugar and Beans, But Chautauqua Tickets Are Still Two Dollars

Nearly Twenty Sessions Announced For Seven Day Festival to Open Here Soon.

LIGHT OPERA BOOKED

Other Big Numbers Include White Hussars, Opie Read and Ralph Bingham

The man who formerly sold a bushel of potatoes for the price of a single admission on band day may now buy a Chautauqua season ticket and have enough left to pay gasoline bills for the big week.

The Chautauquas are not in competition with the corner grocer, for that is entirely out of their line, but they are making an issue of the fact that in spite of tremendous increases in other lines the price of Chautauqua season tickets remains the same as in previous years.

For $2 local people will have the privilege this season of enjoying nearly twenty sessions extending over a period of seven days. Included in the exceptionally strong program are such attractions as the Killarney Girls; Edwin M. Whitney, reader; The Regniers in music and impersonations; Ida C. Bailey Allen, home economics expert; Dr. Ng Poon Chew, "The Chinese Mark Twain"; Charles E. Barker, health expert; the Metropolitan Artists; the Murray-Lane Company in the light opera "Dorothy"; Dr. Edward T. Hagerman; the Christine Giles Company; Ralph Bingham, humorist; Walton Pyre, actor-monoologist, and the White Hussars, a singing band.

Two special features of Chautauqua week will be Patriotic Day and Health Day. Some surprisingly valuable and entertaining sessions are included in the seven day program, and with season tickets still selling at $2 it is believed that the attendance will exceed all previous records.
